4.2 Direct Write Laser Lithography system: description of requirements

Photoresist type and thickness: We are interested in the maskless exposure of photoresist films compatible with 405 nm or 375 nm wavelengths. These films will have thicknesses ranging from $\sim 200\text{ }\mu\text{m}$ down to $\sim 0.1\text{ }\mu\text{m}$. The primary photoresist of interest is SU-8; however, we will also require the exposure of other films, both positive and negative tone, that are compatible with these wavelengths.

Substrate: Substrates will vary in composition, size, opacity, and thickness. The substrate composition will include (but not limited to) polished silicon, glass, acrylic, and CR39 plastic substrates. Substrates might not be flat and may have a slight degree of curvature; focus correction during the exposure process is thus desired.

Feature size resolution: The desired minimum feature size is $0.6\text{ }\mu\text{m}$. The capability of aspect ratios > 10 is highly desired.

Write speed: The minimum write speed should be above $1\text{ mm}^2/\text{min}$. The capability for simultaneous writing is desired, for example, writing larger features at high speeds (possibly with multiple lasers), then writing smaller features with higher resolution at slower speeds.

Realignment precision: Concerning the multi-layer exposures of the lithographic films (e.g. exposure of film 1, recoating the substrate with a new film, exposure of film 2 having an alignment to film 1), the precision of realignment should be $\sim 1\text{ }\mu\text{m}$ (figure 1).

Temperature Stabilization: It is desired to keep the substrate at a stable temperature with deviations less than $\pm 1^\circ\text{C}$ during the exposure process.
